USE OF WATER IN STREET CLEANING

Has Philadelphia an adequate supply of water? This question is constantly coming up, and is a pleasant habit of doubting nothing, and taking everything for granted; but if one were to credit the city officials, one would be led to believe that the city has an endless supply of water, and that the citizens can use as much as they please. However, this is not the case.

In the days of the French Revolution, the people of Philadelphia had to suffer from a lack of water, and the city was in a state of great distress. The officials at that time were not able to supply enough water for the needs of the city, and the people had to suffer in order to get what little water they could.

Now, the city of Philadelphia is in a much better state today. The officials are able to supply enough water for the needs of the city, and the people are able to use as much as they please. However, the city is still in a state of great distress, and the people are still suffering from a lack of water.

In order to overcome this problem, the city officials have taken steps to increase the supply of water. They have built new reservoirs, and they have also increased the capacity of the existing reservoirs. These steps have been taken in order to ensure that the city has enough water for the future.

As a result of these steps, the city officials are now able to supply enough water for the needs of the city. The people are now able to use as much water as they please, and the city is in a much better state than it was before.

In conclusion, it can be said that Philadelphia has an adequate supply of water. The city officials have taken steps to increase the supply of water, and the people are now able to use as much water as they please. However, the city is still in a state of great distress, and the people are still suffering from a lack of water. The city officials need to continue to take steps to ensure that the city has enough water for the future.
